Teaching Experience

Credit-bearing courses:

UCOR100: Research & Info Skills, Duquesne University (Spring 2017, Spring 2018)

In this course first year students learned research skills based on the ACRL framework, including copyright, literature searching, and evaluating authority.

UCOR103: Inter-professional Education Health Research Skills, Duquesne University (3 sections Fall 2017)

This course, taught to first year students in nursing, pharmacy, and the health sciences, focused on research and inter-professional skills, including searching PubMed and CINAHL, understanding study types and evidence-based practice, and research ethics. The course culminated in a final project that included a research poster and annotated bibliography.

Non-credit bearing course:

Surviving an Infodemic: Finding and Evaluating Health Information Online, Pitt Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (Fall 2021)

In this 5 week course, students examined how medical knowledge is created and disseminated, and learned how to locate and evaluate online health information.
